In concordance with the FDA stance "FDA is supporting a shift to a more robust regulatory framework for oversight of BPA," and as a concerned citizen, I would like to be another voice in favor of labeling products with this chemical so that all consumers may make a truly informed decision as to whether they would like to risk exposure to it. The risks to reproductive health are great enough to merit a ban, but at the least, I implore the EPA to start with labeling as a warning and education tool. This is my official comment.
