Although not a California resident, I am extremely concerned about the massive spraying of this dangerous chemical all over the United States and in fact, as the most prevalent herbicide used in the world, it appears that almost everyone has some exposure to this very harmful product. I have seen the manufacturer's insistence that this is harmless. But there are now many scientific studies that say the opposite. And yet we are all exposed based on bias studies done by industry to make sure that their profits come before safety. Same story for so many chemicals that we are exposed to. And Americans seem to get the worst of everything because we just up the limits when it is proven that they are already higher than the "supposed" safe levels.

There is no safe level of glyphosate. Just like DDT. This product should be banned. Just like DDT. I hope that California will be the first state to lead the nation in letting everyone know that you at least want to protect your citizens. Maybe other states will wake up and do the same.
